How You'll Learn

How You'll Learn

Hands-on coding environments

You don't get better at swimming by watching others. Coding is no different. Practice as you learn with live code environments inside your browser.

Faster than videos

Videos are holding you back. The average video tutorial is spoken at 150 words per minute, while you can read at 250. That's why our courses are text-based.

No set-up required

Start learning immediately instead of fiddling with SDKs and IDEs. It's all on the cloud.

Progress you can show

Built in assessments let you test your skills. Completion certificates let you show them off.

What our learners are saying

"I found your site 24 hours before interviewing at Amazon. It was my 2nd try with Amazon, and I knew that one of the problems they had with me the first time was that I didn't really know how to work through the system design phase of the interview. I spent the day reading the basics section and then read through all of the problems. I not only got an offer from Amazon, the group the guy was from asked me to sign on with them. Relative to the salary offer that followed, the cost of this course was without question the best investment in the history of the universe!

Robert
Software Engineer @ Amazon

"Great course. After going through it, I think, the real value is in the system design problems. For that alone, it's worth it, even for an experienced professional. The course focuses on laying down the thought process for attacking a system design problem. Interviewers are looking for a collaborative communication and demonstration of the problem-solving process; that organization of thought alone is worth buying the course.

Hamid Zia
Software Engineer @ Google
